4. A New Model for Hearing and Wellness in Long Term Care Communities (1 CE)
Speaker: Janie York

The intersection between hearing care and wellness care creates many challenges in long-term care communities. By creating a new model for how we provide hearing services, we can identify hearing concerns before they become serious, ease the burden on facility staff, reduce costs by avoiding hearing aid replacements, and improve communication and connection. Most hearing-impaired residents living in long-term care communities need assistance with their hearing aids, however, only a small percentage of staff feel confident in their skills to provide that support. Mobile hearing services enrich the lives of residents by re-engaging them with family, friends, and healthcare providers, all while generating revenue for your practice. Mobile hearing services provide basic ear health, hearing aid care, and hearing aid management to facilities. This solution will change the way hearing care is provided, creating a more efficient, cost-effective service for residents that brings them back into the conversation.

Learning Objectives:

- Understand the challenges faced by hearing-impaired individuals residing in long-term care communities.
- Identify the wellness deficits faced by long-term care residents when hearing care is not addressed, and how to address them.
- Discuss the tools your practice can use to serve this population, while also adding to your revenue.

4:00 - 4:15 p.m. Break
